PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

There are many hellebores in my gardens and one is called the Christmas rose, but it has never bloomed until spring when all the others did. This year, I have enjoyed a new Christmas rose that actually began blooming in December, Helleborus niger 'HGC Jacob'.

As gardeners, we know the importance of soil. The United Nations is calling attention to soil by designating 2015 as the "International Year of Soils". This attempts to bring worldwide attention to the importance of soil sustainability as the basis of food systems, fuel, and fiber production and to raise awareness of the limits on our soil as a natural resource. There is a calendar put out by the USDA showcasing the importance of soil with monthly themes, e.g., January: Soils Sustain Life; February: Soils support urban life. The National Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) has copies of the calendar, 2015 Soil Planner, which is very informative. Check out the website, www.nrcs.usda.gov.

MEMBERS' CORNER

When I read that the NARGS annual general meeting would be held in Ann Arbor, Michigan, I knew immediately that Steve and I would want to attend. We met at The University of Michigan and spent eight happy years in the state, discovering a myriad of places to see spectacular displays of wildflowers. From the ravines of the Grand River in the south to the ladyslippers near the Straits of Mackinac in the north, to the waterfalls of Munising in the Upper Peninsula we discovered treasures. I have photo albums filled with Steve's pictures to prove it. Nowhere else, for example, have I seen swaths of Trillium grandiflorum so extensive that it is easily identifiable while speeding 70 mph down the interstate.

As a New Englander born and bred with a lifelong love of wildflowers, I have to say that Michigan has us beat for variety and sheer abundance. To have a chance to see those stands of wildflowers in their full May glory is an opportunity not to be missed. I hope to see you there.

Houseplants can purify air and remove toxic agents such as benzene, formaldehyde and trichloroethylene which are found in glue, paint, particle board, paper, carpets, paint stripper and spot remover. Indoor plants will also benefit the air by making oxygen levels higher because a few types will release oxygen at night. Most of these are succulents, moth orchids, dendrobium orchids, and bromeliads. These would make great plants for the bedroom. A home with a lot of houseplants will have 50-60% fewer mold spores and bacteria. A study in Australia found that indoor plants reduce anger by 44%, fatigue by 38% and depression by 58%. Plants also are natural humidifiers.

Some air cleaning plants are Aloe vera, areca palm, Dracaena deremensis 'Janet Craig' (this can be poisonous if eaten), dragon tree, English ivy, Ficus 'Amstel King', gerbera daisy, peace lily, rubber plant (Ficus elastica), snake plant, spider plant and weeping fig (Ficus benjamina). The culture of each plant needs to be adhered to in order for the plant to grow well, information that should be available with a Google search. A good source for most of these plants is Logee's Greenhouses in Danielson.

BOOK REVIEWS WANTED

Make my New Year happy by agreeing to review books for the NARGS Book-of-the-Month program. I would like to encourage anyone who has a favorite gardening related book to write a review and send it to me. The book doesn't have to be about alpiners, just garden or natural world related. The book should be either in print or readily available on the second hand market, and not previously reviewed on our website. Make my day; write a review.

HIKING THE ALPS

By Bonnie Maguire

During the first two weeks of June my partner, Bill Hoover, and I traveled to Switzerland to hike in the Alps. We stayed in Reuti, a village on Hasliberg Mountain between Lucerne and Interlaken in central Switzerland. We made our arrangements through Untours which, in addition to providing us with guide books on sites to see as well as an in-country coordinator, also arranged our travel passes.

The guest apartment where we stayed was on the ground level of a family's home; we enjoyed a stocked fridge when we arrived and great views. Mornings began with a trip to the village market for fresh fruit. Then it was off to catch a bus, then one or two trains, boat rides, and then one or more cable cars before we finally began our hike.

Top: Gentiana acaulis. Bottom: Gentiana verna.

On one day we had as many as seventeen transfers to get to and from our hiking area so having the Swiss Pass certainly came in handy.

Our first day when we hiked to Magisclap, two cable stations up Hasliberg Mountain, was the best day for seeing alpines. We took one cable car and then had an easy, but steep, hike up a paved road that twisted through meadows of wildflowers. The five hour hike to get back down was on a steep trail but there were scads of gentians in bloom. Since I love gentians, I especially liked to see masses of them along the trail.

I had read that the Schynige Platte Botanical Alpine Garden was a must-see but, to my disappointment, this garden didn't open until the end of June. Instead, we went to Allmondhubel, a "paradise for hikers" above Murren, at an elevation of 6273 feet. Here, all plants were set in widely caged areas and clearly identified.

We loved seeing the meadows full of flowers as we hiked and it was of interest to me that the farmers are paid to not cut some fields until after July 15th so the wildflowers can set seed. And I was struck by the sight, in the middle of June, of a hillside covered with alpine crocus.

Top to bottom: Dryas octopetala, Potentilla nivea, and Veronica satureioides var. kotchyana.

Crocus albiflorus at high altitude in June.

Bev & Bob Walters:

Along with these four gardens, we will have brief (20 min) workshops at each garden as a “how to” showcase of some of the unique elements in the garden.

Plus, we will be visiting two NATURAL AREAS – a sand barren NW of Ann Arbor where we should be able to celebrate a large colony of the Bird’s foot violet, the finest eastern North American species and also a rich deciduous forest where we will show visitors our beautiful burst of spring bloom, especially trilliums.

There will be OPEN GARDENS & NURSERIES to visit on Sunday, May 10.

Plus, we will have POST CONFERENCE TOUR, May 10-12. The post conference field trip will be to the “Straits Region” of Michigan, about 280 miles north of Ann Arbor, with stops on the way there and back. The focus will be on natural rock gardens and rock garden plants in the wild. We will look at shaded and sunny rock outcrops, rocky, gravelly, and sandy beaches, and open communities back of the beaches, plus a stop to see large stands of trilliums, and brief stops for other selected items including sand dunes, and, if time allows, jack pine barrens. It will be early for large scale bloom, but we should certainly see bloom in many species with some nice displays. This is limited to 24 people.
